MOTT GENEALOGY

(from about 1663 to 1929)

Major General Gershom Mott of New Jersey traced his descent from the immigrant from Essex, England; the first Adam Mott of Hempstead, Long Island, through Adam's son Gershom, who was born in Hempstead about 1663. The name Mott or De La Motte, is French and not uncommon. De La Motte Fenelon was the great Archbishop Cambrai. It is not, however, proposed here to attempt to trace the European ancestry of the immigrant, Adam Mott. But it may be noted that the Mott family had been prominent in the county of Essex, England, for several centuries and doubtless came originally from France, perhaps with William The Conqueror. After a time the French prefix had been usually abandoned although De Motte is still retained in some families both in this country and in England. The Motts of Essex, England, owned many manors and the main line can be traced for five hundred years. The crest of the Essex Motts is a star with eight points on a crown and the Latin motto which in English reads, "Speed, Strength, Truth."

According to the records of the Dutch Church of New Amsterdam, Adam Mott (1) of Essex, England, was married in New Amsterdam, 7, 28, 1647 to Jane Hulet of Buckingham, England. To them were born eight children of whom there is no record except of the Jane Hulet died and Adam Mott married Elizabeth Richbell. To this union were born five children; the youngest of whom was given the name of Adam altho his eldest son Adam was still living and thus in his will, offered for probate in 1689, he speaks of his eldest son Adam and his youngest son Adam.

~~Gershom Mott (2) son of Adam (1) and Jane Hulet Mott~~ moved to New Jersey where he became prominent. In 1695 Gershom Mott (8) married Catherine Bowne (family in Iowa) a daughter of Captain John Bowne. The following are the children of Gershom Mott (2) as given in his family Bible.

John (4) son of William (3) and Catharine Bowne Mott, was a Captain in the Revolutionary War and was grandfather of General Gershom Mott. He was twenty-one years old when the French and Indian War broke out. When, however, the Battle of Lexington in 1775 opened the American Revolution, John Mott (4) was living on a farm above Trent, now occupied by the New Jersey Hospital for the Insane. He also owned a mill and took an active part in all public affairs and was among the first to join in armed resistance to British aggression. As the war progressed he was made lieutenant, and when they came again into New Jersey his local knowledge of the country made him of great service as Washington's guide. After the war, Captain Mott turned his mind to more peaceful ways, but served for a time as captain of militia. At the mature age of fifty he married Eleanor Johnston, widow of Captain Alexander of the British Navy. He and his wife are buried in the Quaker burial ground in Trenton, whence it may be supposed that at the time of their deaths they belonged to the Society of Friends. He died in 1804.
